

Best airway practice in intensive care medicine 2018

There has been great focus on airway practices in intensive care medicine over recent years. In 2018, this has been highlighted by both the DAS guidelines specific to intubation in intensive care medicine and the recently published push by David Brewster and his colleagues for mandatory airway education for ICU specialists to be included in the CICM CPD. David will discuss his recent research regarding current airway practices of intensive care specialists in Australia and NZ and the need for airway education in their CPD, as well as the development of intensive care advanced airway education programs, such as Beyond BASIC: Airway Management, which are now run internationally. David will challenge you to consider the best way forward for both your department and yourself with your airway practices and education.
