

Bleeding and Anticoagulation Management in ECMO

The complexity and significance of this topic in ECMO management will be introduced with a case vignette.

This will be followed by a discussion on the haemostatic perturbations seen in during ECMO, including factors that predispose to bleeding and those that predispose to thrombosis.

The clinical literature in the area will be reviewed

In addition, strategies for anticoagulation and alternatives as well as monitoring strategies will be discussed.